However much we may deprecate Russia's action in the Far East, and we certainly are to freedom, the Russian peasant showed not going to whitewash her methods of pure aggression and undisgulard selfishness, there is yet much in it that consists of genuine progress, which as Englishmen we should be the last to oppose or contravene. The race that has peopled the entire breadth of the North American continent, and has made a nation of Australia, and accomplished all this within the century, is not likely to view with hostile feelings the natural outlet that Russia has found in Mastern Asia rather would she extend the right hand of friendship, and hail Russia as a fellowworker in the great cause of humanity. I many respects the two great colonies of British Columbia and Primorsk, which have fallen to England and Russia respectively, when Russia began to look upon Siberia as will bear comparison; both are fertile, both possessed of great mineral wealth, and both within that climatic range where the European finds the greatest scope for his faculties, mental and physical. Moreover, both have been part of the natural expansion of the nations' legitimate advance. We cannot go or still wilder mon, are now becoming the back-to the times of WILLIAM III, nor can Russia retrace her steps to the foundation tion. Such has been the outcome of Russia's brought the two nations face to face on the have our ways of colonisation, and Russia has here; and it is, to say the least of it, unfortunate that Russia, with so fair and open a case in her hands, should have deaconded to the unfriendly and too frequently underhand methods which have accompanied her march through Asia. It is true that me did not understand Russia, and that much of the ill-feeling that has arisen between the two Empires is the fruit of this misunderstanding ; but the misunderstanding has been the fault of Russia herself, and

THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA. NEWS VIA CEYLON. A HOPEFUL SITUATION.

The correspondents with Lord Roberts at Bloemfontein report very hopefully on the situ- himself. ation. The Commander in Chief is doing everything to equip the army thoroughly for the rigors of a winter campaign. BORE TREATMENT OF SIUK AND WOUNDED.

PROTEST BY LORD ROBERTS. Lord Roberts has protested against the Boer treatment of the sick and wounded prisoners, there being sufficient evidence to convince him very bitter feeling against the Transvaal Boers, both among the British and the Free Staters who have surrendered.

Since his return to England, Sir George White has been besieged by interviewers, but he refuses to say anything with reference to Mr. Winston Churchill's statement that he (Sir George) complained of attempts to surpersede him. Despatches relating to Spionkop bristle with painful contradictions. General Buller apparently ordered General Warren to hold back his right opposite Spionkop, and press his left forward, so as to gain the open ground beyond; but General. Warren's Staff concurred that the Acton Holmes Road was impossible and Spionkop essential. Gen. Coke, when ordered to attack; requested delay for the purpose of reconnoitring the onemy's position. Nevertheless, Gen. Woodgate carried it successfully, failing himself. Col. Crofton heliographed :- " Reinforcements at once, or all is lost; General dead," Thereupon Gen. Coke advanced, he himself remaining at the foot of the hill because he

THE MOST POWERFUL SHIP IN TH. WOKLD.

The first-class line-of-battle ship Asali, con- Mr. G. H. Dann a structed at Eliswick to order of the Japanese Government, has been duly taken over by Captain Mist and the crew sent to England to bring her out. A telegram to Japan, dated the 12th instant, reported that the transfer was completed on that day, and that the ship was lying at Southampton. The Namel and Military Record speaks of her thus: -The Japanese buttleship Aschi is the most powerful battleship in the world, being 200 tons heavier than the Formidable class, and carrying two more 6-inch and Mr. J. Havs two more smaller guns than the latest type of Mr. Hind, kroper, British battleship. In the controversy that has Mr. Chantrey Inbehald been going on of late with regard to the favour Mr. H. U. defiries shown by contractors to foreign Governments it | Major G. R. St. John is interesting to bear in mind that the Asahi was Mr. R. Fleming Johnlaid down at Clydebank at the end of 1897, or two years and four months ago, and as soon as she has completed her armament she will be ready for commission. But, just as the public mind has been cleared of the delusion that the launch of a ship marks a distinct period in her progress, it is now necessary to destroy the impression that the laying down of the first keel-plate indicates the astual commencement of a ship. Invidious comparisons have been drawn, for instance, between the Asahi and the Formidable. The Japanese ship, we are told, was lau uched only a year ago, while the Formidable was launched as far back as November, 1808; yet Mr. and Mrs. J. F. A. Cap J. D. Ross. the foreigner has stolen a march on us Again, if we are to be guided by figures, it is Mrs. Chester M. Knepsaid that the Asuhi was commenced three mouths earlier than the English ship, and has been completed nine months in advance of her. All Mr. R. D. Ander on such comparisons, however, are based on false data. A ship is not commenced when her keel is laid, but when the drawings are delivered and a start on the preparation of material is made. Nor is the steam trial a safer criterion Mr. & Mrs. J. J. Elizalde than the hunch of a ship, as the Asahi demonstrates, for while she is ready for steaming she is by no means ready for her wun trials. Unquestionably the Japanese ship enjoys the advantage of being built by the firm supplying the armour plate, but if we measure the time of building a ship by the interval that clapses between the placing of the order and the boisting of the nounant it will be found that there
